

ABSTRACT

The present invention relates to paint compositions having a water-based resin system having a colorant granule that does not dissolve therein. The resulting paint compositions produce unusual, but desirable, effects after the application of sufficient pressure to release a second colorant. Hence, the present invention includes methods for their use and manufacture.